

Oregon & Texas A&M Women To Battle Again

Chart #1

Last year a strong final day at the NCAA Championships helped propel Texas A&M to its first national women's title. The victim was Oregon, by 7 points. Vin Lananna's Ducks then steamrolled their way to this year's indoor title and with the home-field advantage are favored to win it all in Eugene in June.

Pat Henry's Aggies, though, are currently slotted only 3 points behind the hosts, so it's still very much a tossup 2 months out. What does seem clear, however, is that nobody but the two powerhouses have a chance to take home the team trophy.

Both teams are currently projected to have a dozen scorers (top 8).

A&M, of course, is very strong in the sprints & hurdles, and formcharts like this: 2 in the 100 and 200, 1 in the 400, 3 in the 100H, 1 in the 400H, both relays and 1 in the javelin).

Oregon's strength is more spread out, with these scorers: 100, 200, 400, 2 in the 1500, 2 in the 5000, both relays, pole vault, long jump, heptathlon.

Obviously, the whole thing probably teeters on how they split the points in the 5 events in which they go head to head: 100, 200, 400 and both relays.

The 10-deep predictions for each event (* = junior; **=soph; *** = frosh, all others are seniors; ' = foreigner;):
