Oregon & Texas A&M Women Draw Closer

Chart #2

In our first formchart of the year, host Oregon was rated as a 3-point favorite over defending champion Texas A&M. In the three weeks of action since then, Oregon’s total has remained static, while the Aggies have added a couple of points to their rating, so now only a single digit separates the two powerhouses, who remain miles ahead of No. 3 Virginia Tech.

A&M is now ahead of Oregon in terms of potential scorers (top 8), 13 to 12. Should the meet go according to form, it will all come down to the ultimate event, the 4x4 (isn’t that the way a proper team battle is supposed to end), with Oregon at 57 points and A&M at 60. The Ducks won the Indoor and are currently rated as No. 1 in the event, so their fate largely rests in their hands, but under the projected scenario they’d also need help from some/any other team to keep the defenders no higher than 3rd.

The 10-deep predictions for each event (* = junior; **=soph; *** = frosh, all others are seniors; ' = foreigner):
